MIDLIFE IN THE UNITED STATES: A NATIONAL STUDY OF HEALTH AND WELL-BEING

FUNDED BY THE NATIONAL INSTITUTE ON AGING

MIDUS 2 Project 1

Abstract

In 1995-96, the MacArthur Midlife Research Network carried out a national survey of over 7,000 Americans aged 25 to 74 [ICPSR 2760]. This baseline survey was called Midlife in the United States (MIDUS 1) and investigated the role of behavioral, psychological, and social factors in understanding age-related differences in physical and mental health. The study was innovative for its broad scientific scope, its diverse samples (which included twins and the siblings of main sample respondents), and its creative use of in-depth assessments in key areas (e.g., daily stress and cognitive functioning). A description of the study and findings from it are available at http://www.midus.wisc.edu. With support from the National Institute on Aging, a longitudinal follow-up of the original MIDUS Core sample (including Main RDD sample (N = 3,487), metropolitan over-sample (N = 757), twins (N = 925 complete pairs), and siblings (N = 950)) was conducted in 2004-2005. Guiding hypotheses for it, at the most general level, were that behavioral and psychosocial factors are consequential for later-life physical and mental health. Data collection largely repeated baseline assessments (e.g., phone interview and extensive self-administered questionnaire (SAQ)), with additional questions in selected areas (e.g., cognitive functioning, optimism and coping, stressful life events, and caregiving). Also administered was a modified form of the mail questionnaire via telephone (called SAQxPhone) to respondents who did not complete a SAQ. To add refinements to MIDUS 2, an African American sample (N = 592) was recruited from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, who participated in a personal interview and completed a questionnaire paralleling the above assessments. Survey data and documentation for the Milwaukee sample are available in a separate project [ICPSR 22840]. Overall, complete survey data were collected from over 5,500 individuals at M2.
